

25X1

Approved For Release 2003/03/28 : CIA-RDP79R00890A000500030014-4

Approved For Release 2003/03/28 : CIA-RDP79R00890A000500030014-4

Approved For Release 2003/03/28 : CIA-RDP79R00890A000500030014-4

- XI. Soviet MA's assigned to East European Satellites after mid-1953 were higher-ranking and had more distinguished combat records than predecessors.
- A. All commanded corps or higher during World War II, whereas most of predecessors had commanded units no larger than division.
 - B. Five were of Soviet two-star rank (Lieutenant General), following a trend toward the upgrading of these posts evident since 1950.

Approved For Release 2003/03/28 : CIA-RDP79R00890A000500030014-4

- C. Czechoslovakia got the highest-ranking Soviet MA, a three-star Colonel General. This has been true since 1950.
 - D. All but one held the Order of the Gold Star, with accompanying title "Hero of the Soviet Union," the highest Soviet decoration.
 - E. At least two commanded corps under Zhukov in World War II.
- III. Arrival these attaches in Satellites after mid-1953 thought to signify new phase in Satellite military development.
- A. Soviet MA responsible for general supervision and training of individual Satellite force.
 - B. These combat officers emphasized qualitative improvement in training and combat readiness of Satellite forces, which improved noticeably following their appointments.